Relationships grow from shared values: hard work, concern for the welfare of people and the environment, and concern for the future. These values are intrinsic to the missions of both <redacted> Ranches and <redacted>. Together, our two organizations can create cultures that maintain growth without sacrificing our greatest resource, the land.

Over the past sixty years, <redacted> Ranches has become a vital part of Central Florida. Covering nearly three hundred thousand acres, <redacted> manages beef production, citrus groves, and wetland and timber resources. Using advanced production practices to minimize fertilizer and chemical use, <redacted> is a leader in wildlife preservation and the protection of water quality.

For <redacted>, stewardship of the land is of utmost concern. And the returns are worth all the labor. As the natural beauty of Central Florida is protected and enhanced, the local community can share in the harvest, financially and recreationally. As a favorite venue for many community activities, <redacted> creates the perfect refuge for people, as well as a habitat for many endangered species.

But maintaining a diverse and vital environment such as this is always a challenge. Partnering with organizations that share the vision of sustainability and creating a healthier planet can always be beneficial. <redacted> is such an organization. Creating all-natural, organic products that foster a healthier world is our mission, our objective, and our primary motivation.

We at <redacted> provide agriculturally sustainable products that take an all-natural, environmentally safe approach to pest management and soil fertility. Using the essential oils within plants, we produce natural fertilizers, fungicides, and pesticides free from damaging environmental effects. By harnessing the power of the environment, our products safely energize the soil, allowing nature to be its own healer.

With a shared vision, a relationship with <redacted> would provide the support to take <redacted> Ranches confidently into the future, providing a legacy for family and community for years to come.
